

Is Donald Trump tweeting us toward a catastrophic war with North Korea?

This is not a joke or hyperbole!

With each rogue speech or unhinged tweet Trump makes about blowing up the reclusive regime, North Korean officials fire back with reckless threats of their own. Provocations are growing: the U.S. is flying bombers near North Korea, and their foreign minister is threatening to shoot them down.

Foreign policy experts worry that the United States is headed toward a preventable war. Former U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry warns: the danger is that we would blunder into a nuclear war by ... "a conventional military conflict and a conventional war escalating into that."

Are we racing towards nuclear war?

We need to take a giant step back from the brink.
